THE BRAZILIAN TROUBLES

The Rebel Fleet Still Bombarding Rio Janeiro

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 The Herald's Montevideo correspondent cables: Information has just reached here that Mello's fleet is again bombarding Rio de Janeiro. The fleet is throwing shot and shell into the capitol. The gunners however, have evidently been instructed to spare the residences and private property and to direct their fire exclusively at the government buildings. For this reason little damage is being done in the city generally, although the greatest alarm is felt. Many families have fled to escape the barbarities perpetrated by Peixoto's troops. The President's forces are replying to the fire of the ships from batteries which were thrown up along the water front.

THE GREAT YACHT RACE.

A Drifting Match Only Between the Vigilant and Valkyrie.

Pleasure Craft Get in the Path of the Contesting Yachts

SANDY HOOK N J Oct 5 All New York apparently got up early this morning as the talking began that rated in size from an ocean steamship to a naphtha launch put to sea in order to witness the first of the races for America's cup. Never before in one day have so many people embarked on vessels and gone to sea from this port. Despite the fact the trial races which usually steamboats were nearly swamped the heavy seas did not daunt thousands to secure a passage on the big ocean steamships which were for the time pressed into service. Excursion boats. There were also Long Island Sound boats and vessels belonging to the Old Dominion line. Hyland Lord rented out their fleet of sailing boats for rough weather. Steamboats from points hundreds of miles away were in the procession and with all the local boats the steamers and sailing yachts and thousands of tugs and row big, built. As they sailed down they were saluted by the big ocean steamers lying at anchor. Hundreds waved their handkerchiefs and cheered as they passed.

A high mist hung over the water in the early morning and after was scarcely living of a breeze which gave promise of a fine day for the race.

At 10 there was a change in the position of the boats and as the Vigilant began to stand off shore, everybody concluded the race had been declared off. Afterwards it was concluded that the Vigilant was hunting for wind. At this hour 1 15 the wind where the yachts are is southerly. The Valkyrie is about three quarters of a mile ahead of the Vigilant, but the latter has the advantage to windward made by the Valkyrie kept on down to windward. When the latter straightened out on the course the Englishboat was well ahead. She is steadily increasing her advantage.

Nearing the Turning Point

HIGHLANDS OF NAVESINK 2 30 P M Sayonara is very slowly getting near the turning point. She is south southwest and will round the stake boat on the starboard bow. She appears to be feeling the effects of a good swell and the Vigilant is rolling much more than the latter.

The Start

LONDON Oct 5 The Daily News correspondent of the yacht races reports by a pigeon message from the Prince of Wales as follows:

11 25 10 Valkyrie 11 25 40

The Valkyrie in the Lead

HOOK, 3 P M The Daily News No 5 Long Branch reports the Valkyrie in the lead and within a mile of the stake boat.

The Vigilant Turning the Stake Boat

SANDY HOOK 4 10 The life saving station at Long Branch reports the Vigilant turning the stake boat at 4 02, 23 minutes after the Valkyrie.

One Hour to Finish

HIGHLANDS OF NAVESINK At 4 30 the Valkyrie was fully ten miles from Sandy Hook lightship. She then had one hour in which to finish and it does not seem possible for her to do so.

CHURCH BELL RUNG

By a Wee Mouse—Excited Townfolk Aroused from Their Beds

The church mouse is a time worn standard of poverty and a full matured church mouse is of course no exception to the rule. And that is the reason that the hungry little fellow took a night lunch on the insulation of the burglar alarm wires in Grace Church.

Fifteen lost to great results and this fact, fellow mouse will surely go down in local history as a rodent exhibition worthy a history of blind Tom.

For the folks of Jamaica Plain that night will be remembered as the night when some one would ever have elected the Bell. If the insulation had never been allowed the bell in the steeple would never have sounded. If the bell in the steeple never had sounded the two watchmen would never have missed their order for burglars and bugled away with old pistols revolvers flags old Western fuel to.

Here followed long distance telephoning to and fro, fetching up the gravestones with witching and doubling ring by invisible hands. Then the way Jamaica Plain took it and they were heard of the happening which shows plainly that in waverly Kerosene is not peculiar to Yaphank, Watuga and every town also on the island.

They gave due credit to the mouse of course because by that logic—a fully national personage—it all—this one was the cause of it all. And all day Sunday and

Electric wires in the church bowels down with it fell in the north chase forming a polar aurora. The wire that ran from Grace Church was crossed by another wire. Of course when it was made to ring, it did ring, but that was not all. Like almost simultaneously from the windows of thousand and fifty tongues were heard to ring. Not content with the church bell, it rang out the fire alarm, and the police telephone, and the factory bells, and the bells of the Catholic church, and the bell of the Unitarian church, and the bell of the Baptist church, and the bell of the Methodist church, and the bell of the Congregational church, and the bell of the Presbyterian church, and the bell of the Episcopal church, and the bell of the Universalist church, and the bell of the Christian church, and the bell of the Lutheran church, and the bell of the Reformed church, and the bell of the Quaker church, and the bell of the Shaker church, and the bell of the Mormon church, and the bell of the Jewish church, and the bell of the Mohammedan church, and the bell of the Buddhist church, and the bell of the Confucian church, and the bell of the Shintoist church, and the bell of the Parsee church, and the bell of the Fetish church, and the bell of the Voodoo church, and the bell of the Obeah church, and the bell of the Hoodoo church, and the bell of the Mumbo Jumbo church, and the bell of the Juggernaut church, and the bell of the Brahma church, and the bell of the Vishnu church, and the bell of the Siva church, and the bell of the Zoroaster church, and the bell of the Confucius church, and the bell of the Mahomet church, and the bell of the Buddha church, and the bell of the Christ church, and the bell of the Holy Ghost church, and the bell of the Trinity church, and the bell of the Father church, and the bell of the Son

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1893.

There is one fact which, to sadly, specially relevant, deserving the notice of those who are opposed to the national banking system. Since the first of January of the present year 158 national banks have suspended. Of these, seventy-five have resumed business, and not a dollar has been lost by the holders of the notes, even of those which have not resumed.

The Democratic organs are now complaining of the right of Governor McKinley's principles. They think he is making too many speeches and from the Democratic standpoint they are right. The speeches will bear fruit in November. The managers of Governor McKinley are greatly rejoiced and the encouragement is great. Ohio is good for a Republican victory this fall.

The Democratic candidate for Governor in Ohio challenged the Republican candidate to the two joint debates in the same town (Findlay) at the same time to get together and have a debate. No definite answer was given, the challenged party, taking the point, is the Opera House the largest hall in the city the largest seats had engaged, each to speak an hour and a half, Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The challenger agreed, claiming the right to open and close, and demanded that the hall should be rented in equal shares to the two parties. It was an impossible case that the two houses were selected by the Republicans, which neither was expected that would accept, as there would be a chance for speakers to make comments.

The contest of the absurd Mr. Vandever, who was given the Ambassador to Italy because he could not afford to the Democratic party when "friends were few and calls were great," has been indefinitely postponed by the Senate committee. It thus appears that the trade is to be ratified and that this country is to be represented abroad by a man whose only claim to recognition is his check book, and this too under a Democratic administration which has always posed as the "friend of the workingman." In this connection the New York Evening Post remarks that "the most striking feature of the case is that it was not expected. Possibly, but after mature deliberation and reflection, and after the receipt of numerous protests in the name of his near and faithful friends" and everything that can be thought will affect a Democratic newspaper's situation of the helplessness of Mr. Cleveland's party servants to political purity.

The Arkansas Iron Company has an application in the Supreme Court in Washington for injunction restraining the Democratic workmen from further acts declared to be in the nature of a conspiracy to injure their business. The bill was argued before Judge Water and a statement of the case complained of were presented to the court. The injunction was granted and if the order of the court is not complied with, the defendants may be proceeded against for contempt. Among the acts set forth in the complaint was the advertisement sent out to the newspapers warning all strangers to stay away from Augusta until the existing trouble is settled. This advertisement appeared in some of the papers, but was declined by The Whig on the ground that it was not truthful as to fact, to injure the business of the manufacturers. Organization for protection is one thing but the boycott and threats of the strikers, is going too far.

Forced to Show His True Colors

(Special Dispatch to the Whig and Courier.)

Mr. Kyle, of Mississippi, a Southern Democrat, addressed Mr. Boutelle, a Republican, and Mr. Kyle, the representative of the Anglo-Saxon race which was born to rule and, was forced to answer a question which every Southern Democrat, as well as nearly every Northern Democrat, knows to be true. It was put by Mr. Murray of South Carolina. Mr. Murray is also a Democrat, but he is not ashamed to be called by the name of Republican, especially when addressing a representative of the Anglo-Saxon race which, in spite of Democratic misrepresentation, is the race which has always posed as the "natural leader of civilization." In this connection the New York Evening Post remarks that "the most striking feature of the case is that it was not expected. Possibly, but after mature deliberation and reflection, and after the receipt of numerous protests in the name of his near and faithful friends" and everything that can be thought will affect a Democratic newspaper's situation of the helplessness of Mr. Cleveland's party servants to political purity.

The Amount Saved.

It is not the sum that a person earns, or receives that makes the real prosperity, after many years, but the amount saved.

For instance, a man of the past twenty-six years in life insurance in the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. would have paid in premiums $1,000 every year, or $26,000 in all, and would have received in cash $40,000 or more, thus making a net profit of $14,000. Besides this he would have had a paid-up policy for $1,000 on which he could borrow $500 or more, or surrender it for cash.

Many persons are now allowing their insurance to lapse, and losing all they have paid in, because they are unable to pay the premium. Why not take a paid-up policy for a part of the amount, and save the rest?

The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co.

pays its claims as soon as they are proved by the claimants. It has never contested a claim, and has never had a dollar of interest due and unpaid.

Its assets exceed the sum offered by any private bank and are kept in the safest way, thus making it the most perfect mutual life insurance company in the world.

Its business is done entirely by the Non-Forfeiture Method, so that a policy does not lapse unless a surrender value is claimed.

Its policies are incontestable after two years, except for fraud, and are free from restrictions as to residence, travel or occupation.

Its policies are non-forfeitable after three years, and contain a definite table showing the amount of paid-up insurance and cash surrender value at the end of each year.

Its policies are payable immediately on death, without waiting for the end of the year.

Its policies are issued on the Tontine Dividend Plan, which gives the insured a large share of the profits.

Its policies are issued on the Gold Bond Plan, which gives the insured a bond for the payment of the policy, and a guaranteed cash surrender value.

Its policies are issued on the Life Income Plan, which gives the insured a life income, and the beneficiary a life income after the death of the insured.

Its policies are issued on the Life Income and Investment Plan, which gives the insured a life income, and the beneficiary a life income after the death of the insured, and a return of the premiums paid.

HEADACHE

There is danger in headaches. It is not simply the pain, but it is a sure sign of disorder internally. Hence it is not enough to take something to stop the pain. The medicine should be a remedy which relieves the pain and destroys or neutralizes the stomach, blood and nerves. Otherwise the pain will speedily return.

Take Dr. Paul Baker's Grape Cure.

No matter whether yours are sick headaches, or nervous, or bilious, or neuralgic, Grape Cure will relieve you. And it fully corrects your people. We cannot explain how the compound works such marvellous cures, that seem to be one of nature's secrets. But the lucky combination of the grape extractive and the herbs used certainly does bring about splendid and wonderful cures. Your own system of the usual narcotic drugs is in the past simply herbal extracts and the grape. Continuous, a prolific source of headache, quickly cured. The use of Grape Cure tones up the general health and makes you feel stronger and more like work.

Boynton an Eccentric Doctor.

Dr. Charles E. Boynton, who was arrested in Rio Janeiro Harbor, last week, was born in Greenland, Mass., in 1857. His parents were well to do farmers. He entered Amherst (Mass.) Agricultural College in 1873 and graduated with honors in 1876, taking a four years' course in three. After leaving Amherst he travelled until 1880, when he entered the Syracuse Medical college. Here he also took a four years' course in three. Boynton was appointed head physician at the Onondagua County Insane Asylum, where he remained one year. He got married in Syracuse and went to Red Canyon, Wyo., in 1884. The last place he practiced was in Bucna Vista, Ore.

Boynton is a cousin of E. Moody Boynton, inventor of a bicycle railway system. He became a disciple of Benjamin R. Tucker, of Boston. "All forms of government he condemns as despotic, ownership of land he regarded as robbery, and capital he held to be the sword used to rule the masses and make them willing subjects to do the bidding of capitalists. So strong was his belief in the theory of abolishing all forms of money that he never presented a bill for services after becoming a convert to the individualistic theory.

It is believed that Boynton went to Rio Janeiro to give his services in aid of the rebels, who are opposed to the existing form of government. From early boyhood he had experimented with explosives, and once came near losing his life while testing a new explosive.

The Doctor has relatives in Syracuse who are wealthy.

The Gallant Fellow-Passenger.

Lily Bertles, the juvenile soubrette, had been spending her holidays on the Lake of Geneva. When about to return to Paris she was accosted at the railway station by a young gentleman whom she had never seen before. He handed her a large basket of gold straw, filled with the choicest flowers, and said: "I am also going to Paris, and these flowers shall serve to introduce us to each other."

When, on their arrival in Paris, Mlle. Lily stepped into a cab the stranger said to her:

"If you will wait a moment, I will have the basket filled with sweets in place of the flowers, as the latter are faded."

On receiving the basket five minutes afterwards the soubrette was astonished at its lightness, and sold her companion so.

"No wonder," said the [illegible] "your Bible hands [illegible]"

WHERE TREATY ELM GREW.

A Glimpse of the Historic Spot Which the City Has Escaped.

If William Penn could step out of the canvas of Benjamin West in Independence Hall and promenade up to the site of his famous dicker with the Indians he would make the flattering discovery that he is a bigger man now than he was when he swapped red flannel and brass buttons under the old elm tree for good Pennsylvania Hoiberland, says the Philadelphia Press.

Should he take a stroll up that way, to the corner of Beach and Hanover streets, any fair day this week he might receive a shock. The monument that marks the site of the famous Treaty Elm has been taken down temporarily and its edges are being chipped off by relic fiends. When the breeze from the broad river is sent too chilly, the edge of the new artificial walk nearest Beach street in the little park makes a convenient place for a couple of loafers to sit while a third "rushes the growler."

In its present aspect the new park, which embraces a few acres and a dock converted into a promenade, resembles the old-fashioned gray lithographs,—there isn't much beauty but plenty of hard lines in it.

As has been announced there will be a grand dedicatory service on October 23, on this spot, which by the wisdom of the city authorities, has been rescued from a condition of disgraceful neglect. There will be 5,000 or 6,000 men in line, and a dozen brass bands.

The ground whereon grew the immortal Treaty Elm of 200 odd years ago has witnessed strange mutations since then. Its sloping shore was used for the first hundred years as a baptismal place for those who preferred immersion. It was on the site of the new city square that the old Van Dusen treadmill was operated for drawing ships at high tide up on the ways of the ship yard. This was in the fifties, when mechanics got $1.12½ per day.

It was at this wharf that the whale, which stranded on Petty's Island before the war, was exhibited at 25 cents a head until the odor of old fish filled the neighborhood and the citizens closed the show.

Later on, John Guyant, the oysterman, owned the wharf, and for a quarter of a century at least it has been the favorite place in Kensington for hiring small boats.

Its last occupant used the wharf for receiving and storing lumber from the South, though portions of the ground in the rear were utilized as stone and marble yards and a boiler house. But the city has it now and next year the spot which for one hundred and fifty years has been practically a barren waste will blossom like the rose, and tourists will not have to spend half a day trying to find the site of the Treaty Elm.

LELAND STANFORD'S ESTATE.

Great Legal Contest May Take Place Over It.

A San Francisco, Cal., despatch says: Within a few days the inventory of the vast estate left by the late United States Senator Leland Stanford will be handed over to the three appraisers by the lawyers of the estate. A part of the list of property has been made public, only those personal notes being given, that there is some hope of collecting.

Sensational interest attaches to the inventory for two reasons. It is known that the estate, rich though it be, is hard up for ready cash, and it is reported that this fact is due to the late Senator's lavish loans made on personal notes.

Some of these loans were in the way of politics, some were on account of railroad and other property interests, and others were for private reasons. The amount of unsecured loans is roughly estimated by people who know a good deal about the estate at $5,000,000. Only a few items of this class, however, appear in the inventory.

The other reason for public interest in the matter is its list of trouble with the men who control the Southern Pacific, particularly Collis P. Huntington.

The hunt is given in this, the closing paragraph of the inventory: "Said executrix is informed and believes that other property exists in the hands of other persons in the city of New York and elsewhere, of which said executrix has given reasonable diligence to ascertain the exact nature, character of value, and said executrix hereby asks leave of said court to file such further and supplemental inventory, exhibiting such property as the same may from time to time be found and received by said executrix."

Mr. Huntington is one of the persons in the city of New York, and this reference may foreshadow a great legal contest, which will let daylight into the Southern Pacific affairs, and into the not always friendly relations of the two millionaires. Mrs. Stanford has never been very friendly to Mr. Huntington, and it is believed that she will press to the end any claim she may have against him.

The only prominent man in the list of promissory notes is United States Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada, who owes the estate of his dead colleague $18,000. Although all the items of Senator Stanford's property are given, no total of his wealth can be figured out. The principal item is 284,780 half shares of Southern Pacific stock.

Dollars Made of Wheat.

A new solution of the silver question has been offered by Thomas A. Edison. In an interview, he said: "The intelligent gold and silver is largely traditional. People allow themselves to be governed by the old ideas on the subject of coinage formulated at a time when national credits existed and currency would be only taken at an intrinsic value. What we need is a new standard of value. I think that the best dollar could be made out of compressed wheat. You take a bushel of wheat and squeeze the water out of it and then compress it into a hard cake the size of a silver dollar and stamp the government mark upon it. That would represent actual value and labor performed, and then you could eat a dollar, for when you wanted to use the wheat all that would be necessary would be to put your money to soak.

"We should then have the basis of wheat as a permanent unit of value which all farmers would appreciate, and the currency of the country would represent actual worth and labor performed. Both gold and silver could then be dispensed with and the present intolerable problem solved. Our currency, moreover, would be as good as gold or silver in foreign exchange, for our wheat goes to all the countries of the world.

"In all this talk about metal for coinage," continued Mr. Edison, "I am surprised that no one has suggested iron. Iron is the most precious metal. Gold is of no use or silver either. Mankind has no use for either gold or silver, but from could not be dispensed with. If the people would only give up this foolish, traditional, hereditary hankering for gold and silver, these metals would not be worth the price of old rags and would be kicked aside by civilization."

Whalers in Good Luck.

A New Bedford despatch says: The first news from the fleet of Arctic whalers, which included some forty odd craft, sailing from this port and San Francisco, was received in this city yesterday.

The news first came in the form of a letter, which was sent down from on board the whaling bark Hunter to an officer's wife in this city, and brought the startling news that five of the whalers were fast in the ice to the northeast of Point Barrow.

The names of the whalers were steamships Mary D. Hume, Orca, Beluga and Thrasher, and bark Hunter, all of San Francisco. The letter stated that the season had been a very log one and there were no whales. This letter was dated August 1.

To-night despatches were received which put an entirely different face on the scare that was occasioned by the letter. The news was brought down from the Arctic by a tender to the whaling fleet, and stated that the catch of the entire fleet to Sept. 5 had been 193 whales.

This was cheering news for the vessel owners, and the detailed report of the catch was awaited with great eagerness. The reports came along, and while the San Francisco vessels will be seen to have made great catches in some instances, the New Bedford vessels were not entirely shut out of the good luck.

The whalers that wintered in the Arctic have had wonderful luck again, and the whalers that wintered at [illegible] river took [illegible] wonderful luck [illegible] Narwhal, [illegible] whales, worth [illegible] are worth something [illegible]

The Use of a Vegetable Among a Savage, African People Transformed Their Natures—Hasheesh Makes Some People Peaceful and Others Drunk.

Alcohol, opium and cocaine are the cause of endless woe to humanity. What if something could be found which could be substituted for these poisons and at the same time have a pleasing and beneficial influence on man, and instead of making him wild would quiet him as did the lyre of Orpheus? The African traveler, Wissmann, describes in detail the cultivation and use of the "rimmbo" among the former cannibal inhabitants of Lubuku, by which their customs and manners were made so mild that it was even forbidden by them to shed the blood of animals. This people, who before had been aggressive leaders in wars, are now living in peace. Villages which heretofore had been engaged in bitter feuds became friendly. Laws and customs of the most peaceful kind were introduced, with the result that the country into which strangers had never before ventured was open to all.

This peaceful disposition, as also the antagonism to the shedding of the blood of animals, points to a characteristic feature of an old oriental people. These are the Indians. The same herb which made the cannibals of Lubuku the friends of men, and which they call "bushilango," has been known to the Indians for centuries as an intoxicant. It is the Indian hemp. In the east the intoxicant extract is made out of the blossoms and out of the whole plant. Generally it is called "hasheesh," which signifies merely hemp. It is chewed like tobacco, or smoked as such, or the juice, called "dhamasack," is used with sugar and almonds or whisky.

In moderate amounts the Indian hemp and its preparations have a mild effect on the nervous system and produce a pleasant state of feeling, at any rate among the orientals. Larger quantities produce intoxication. In the east, the number of those who use the hasheesh is computed at between 200,000,000 and 300,000,000. Physicians are nearly agreed as to the effect of the drug, some proclaiming that it produces manual heart beating, dryness in the throat. When fully efficient it produces the feeling of pleased intoxication and the most agreeable and pleasurable thoughts. Then open follows sleep, deep and dreamless, and on the following morning the pleasant visions are still real and present. This opium or alcohol eventually destroys those who use it to excess goes without saying. On the other hand, the effect of the hemp chewing on the negro is wonderfully quieting.

Wissmann mentions several African people among whom hemp smoking has been firmly introduced as a habit, especially the Wanyamesi. He says he is convinced that the effect of this hemp on the negro is to make him milder and more gentle and to make him more able to the influences of civilization, although it does have to a certain extent an evil influence on the body, which influence, however, is generally exaggerated. Most remarkable is the manner in which a "judgment of God" is secured by the hemp smokers. Those that are accused confirm the smoking of hemp must the guilty ones compelled to make a confession. On the other hand, the thieves of India use this hemp for the purpose of putting their work. They secretly make a hole in the house and fill it with fumes of hemp smoke. This has the effect on the people of the house, and when the thieves enter they find them in the most agreeable humor, incapable of understanding what is going on and even welcoming the marauders with the most pleasant words and gestures. These statements are from the travels of Von Ribra.

Then the hasheesh smokers frequently get into a state much resembling hypnotism, in which it is possible to place the members of the body in any position and to treat the body as though it were all made of joints. The similarity between hypnotism and the effects of hasheesh smoking is so great that Dr. von Schrenk-Notzing of Munich made special investigations of this subject. It is well known that when a person is hypnotized a single word or threatening action suffices to throw the subject into a spasm of rage. The authority just mentioned has discovered that in a similar way a person under the influence of hasheesh can be affected. He even discovered that persons who do not submit to ordinary hypnotism can be put into this state through the chewing or smoking of hasheesh. The faculty most influenced by this narcotic is the imagination. The immediate present is idealized into the most beautiful and fantastic forms. Hearing is made finer, and the finest strains of music affect us as they never did before.—Leipsic Tribune.

Surprised at Clerical Eucashion.

Dr. Berrian, a former rector of Trinity parish in New York city, was an indifferent preacher, but a fine executive officer and a man of great personal kindliness. While he was very simple hearted. A country clergyman, half starved on a salary of $300 a year, came to Dr. Berrian asking his influence to get him a better charge. "Dear me!" answered the good old man. "I don't see why you young clergymen want to change so often. Why, I have been here in Trinity church for 50 years and never have thought of leaving."—San Francisco Argonaut.

"The Wind Blew Through His Whiskers."

A correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch says that the very objectionable bit of slang, "The wind blew through his whiskers," is not American at all. In fact, he says, it was first used by an Englishman, and Dan Chaucer, who wrote the "Canterbury Tales." In the tale of "The Shipman" occurs this remarkable line, "With many a tempest hadd his beard been shaken."

Good Lawyers.

Some of the most pious, the most consecrated, the most consistent, the most humble Christians we have known personally and intimately have been or are now lawyers. We could name several who have through long lives lived close up to their Heavenly Father in sweet and gracious communion. We say further that many of the purest, noblest men we have known—patriots in a high sense, with lofty ideals and a morale comparable to the best—were lawyers. They were an ornament to their country and the human race. We know some of this kind who still survive.—Washington (N. C.) Messenger.
